Hitler Address Given Praise

Banned as Revolt Held
Closed Chapter*

BERLIN, July 14. (AP)—The Nazi press poured forth to the German public today its praise of Adolf Hitler for his Reichstag speech and gave assurances of the world's approval.

All was praise for the Chancellor. His address justifying the violent deaths of seventy-seven persons in the "Roehm revolt" was lauded to the skies.

The identity of the dead, however, unrevealed by Hitler, remained unpublished by the press, and a government spokesman said the official list will never see the light of day.

It was said that had Hitler chosen to have it published he would have announced the names himself.

CORRESPONDENTS APPROVE

Special correspondents of German papers in New York, London, Paris, Warsaw, Rome and other world cities notified their newspapers in long dispatches that all the world is at least impressed and in most cases approves of the Chancellor's words.

"The Fuehrer's speech was received by all listeners throughout the world as the honest confession of a man who is in earnest about the future of his Fatherland and his people as nobody before him," said the Nachtausgabe.

The entire German press called Hitler "one of the greatest figures of all times."

FRANCE'S REACTION

One or another of the papers intimated that in France there was some disappointment that Hitler had not spoken on German foreign policy, and that he had announced the return of the S.A. (storm troops) after the July leave, but these criticisms were not allowed to darken an otherwise bright picture.

So far as official Germany is concerned, the revolt of June 30 is a closed chapter—so much closed that the government apparently will not even bother to supply the list of those who lost their lives.

One informant, usually reliable, said Hitler put his foot down when publication of the list was suggested saying "I will not do the traitors that honor."

PRIVATE KILLINGS HINTED

Another version was that nobody knows the exact extent of the killings, there having been a number of cases of private revenge beside the official executions.

Hitler remains in Berlin, at least until Monday, when he is to receive the Protestant Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, who will present a report on his efforts to unify the German church.

The excitement of recent weeks has so weighed upon the people generally that there seems to be a general desire to adjourn politics for a while.

Financial circles focussed their attention on conversations in Berlin between George L. Harrison, Governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and Hjalmar Schacht, head of the Reichsbank.

The substance of their conversations, while it was safely assured to concern the financial future of Germany, remained undisclosed. Harrison is here for three days, following his conversations at Paris and Basel, Switzerland, and will board the Europa at Bremerhaven Tuesday to return to the United States.

FINANCIAL OBSERVER

Harrison today re-emphasized to the press his strict confinement to the role of financial observer, declining a statement. He repeated his previous assertion that his European visit was without plan or mission aside from gathering information he deems essential.

In conjecture, however, the possibility of devaluation of the mark was again prominent in view of the belief that Schacht is waiting patiently for the dollar and the pound to become stabilized in terms of each before doing anything about the mark.
