℧ │ Privacy and cookies	│ Log in 🔻 │ Register 🔻 │ Subscri
The Telegraph	Search - enhanced by Google
\rightarrow \bullet	Saturday 30 March 2013
HOME NEWS WORLD SPORT FINANCE COMMENT BLOCS CULTURE TRAVEL LIFE FA	SHION TECH Dating Offers Jobs

номе	NEWS	WORI	D SPORT	FINANCE C	OMMENT	BLOGS	CULTURE	TRAVEL	LIFE	FASHION	ТЕСН	Dating	Offers	Jobs
USA	Asia	China	Europe	Middle East	Australas	sia Afr	rica South	America	Centr	al Asia
Iran	Iraq	Israel	Palestini	an Authority	Syria J	fordan	Saudi Arab	ia Bahra	ain I	Dubai Yei	nen Egypt Libya

HOME » NEWS » WORLD NEWS » MIDDLE EAST » SYRIA

John Kerry: US will 'empower' Syria opposition

US Secretary of State John Kerry said in Riyadh Monday that Washington will work to "empower" Syria's opposition, while warning arch-foe Iran that time for talk on Tehran's nuclear ambitions could run out.

Mr Kerry stressed that there was no question of arming the Syrian opposition Photo: EPA

2:59PM GMT 04 Mar 2013

Mr Kerry, on his first tour to the region since becoming the Secretary of State, also met over lunch with Palestinian president Mahmoud Abbas, who flew in to Riyadh unannounced late on Sunday.

Mr Kerry stressed that there was no question of arming the Syrian opposition, even as his Saudi counterpart Prince Saud al-Faisal insisted on the right of Syrians to self-defence.

Syria

News » World News » Middle East » North America » USA »

In Syria

0.

Middle East news »

More From The Web »

More From The Web

News Most Viewed

TODAY	PAST WEEK	PAST MONTH
-------	-----------	------------

- 1. North Korea: 'outbreak of war hours away' as Kim Jong-un plans US strike
- 2. North Korea plan to attack US mainland revealed in photographs
- 3. Iain Duncan Smith: we've given up trying to cut benefits
- 4. North Korea: Kim Jong-un 'targets George W. Bush's home state of Texas'
- Pope washes feet of young Muslim woman prisoner in unprecedented twist on Maundy Thursday

John Kerry: US will 'empower' Syria opposition - Telegraph

Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud bin al-Faisal, right, and John Kerry (AFP)

The United States will continue to work with its "friends to empower the Syrian opposition," Mr Kerry told reporters during a joint press conference with the Saudi foreign minister.

Asked about reports of arms being sent to Syria's rebels from countries such as Qatar and Saudi Arabia, Mr Kerry replied: "The moderate opposition has the ability to make sure that the weapons are getting to them and not to the wrong hands."

Related Articles

- Ambushed: 42 Syrian regime soldiers killed 'by al-Qaeda in Iraq' 04 Mar 2013
- Syrian civil war spills into Iraq as 42 Assad troops killed in ambush 04 Mar 2013
- Syrian rebels topple Assad statue 05 Mar 2013
- Syrian rebels capture governor of Raqqa 05 Mar 2013
- BBC host falls silent over love letter 03 Mar 2013
- Hague dismisses Assad as 'delusional' 03 Mar 2013

However, he added, "there is no guarantee that one weapon or another might not fall in the wrong hands."

The US has so far refused to arm rebels locked in a two-year war against President Bashar al-Assad's loyalists.

Several oil-rich monarchies of the six-member Gulf Cooperation Council, notably Saudi Arabia and Qatar, have supported the rebellion against Mr Assad, a staunch ally of their regional arch-foe Iran.

The GCC members are dissatisfied at the refusal of President Barack Obama's administration to arm Syrian rebels and its perceived lenient attitude towards Tehran, analysts say.

Mr Kerry said his discussions with Gulf officials had also covered ongoing talks between world powers and Iran on its nuclear programme.

Talks with Iran "will not go on for the sake of talks," he said. "Talks cannot become an instrument for delay that in the end makes the situation more dangerous. So there is a finite amount of time."

"(Barack) Obama has made it clear that Iran will not get nuclear weapons," said the top US diplomat. "There is a huge danger of proliferation."

World powers negotiating with Iran to rein in its nuclear programme concluded another round of talks in Kazakhstan last week, after putting forward a proposal to ease biting sanctions if Tehran halts the sensitive work of enriching uranium.

More From The Web »

Syria conflict photos

Children describe terror of Syria conflict

One million Syrian refugees should be 'wake up call'

Damascus car bomb

Syria: the fight goes on

John Kerry: US will 'empower' Syria opposition - Telegraph

"Saudi Arabia supports the efforts to resolve the crisis diplomatically," said the Saudi foreign minister. "We hope that the negotiations will result in putting an end to this problem... the negotiations cannot go on forever."

World powers accuse Tehran of masking a weapons programme under the guise of a civilian atomic drive. Iran denies these charges.

Mr Kerry, left, with Saudi Crown Prince Salman bin Abdul Aziz (AP)

During his flurry of meetings in Riyadh on Monday, Mr Kerry also held talks with Saudi Crown Prince Salman bin Abdul Aziz, but had no plans for a meeting with King Abdullah, officials said.

He also met Palestinian president Mahmoud Abbas who flew unexpectedly into Riyadh late Sunday.

Prior to their meeting, Palestinian envoy in Riyadh, Jamal al-Shawbaki, told the official Voice of Palestine radio that Mr Abbas "will present the Palestinian point of view to the new US administration ahead of Obama's visit".

Mr Obama is due to meet Israeli and Palestinian leaders in Jerusalem and Ramallah during a visit on March 20-22.

Mr Abbas, in his first meeting with Mr Kerry, will also "highlight Israeli violations in Jerusalem, settlements, and the issue of Palestinian prisoners on hunger strike," said Mr Shawbaki.

Palestinian-Israeli peace talks have been deadlocked for more than two years.

Mr Abbas wants to renew peace talks in tandem with a freeze on Jewish settlement construction in the occupied West Bank and in east Jerusalem.

US officials said Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had been made aware of the unscheduled Kerry-Abbas meeting.

After winding up the Saudi leg of his tour later Monday, Mr Kerry will head to Abu Dhabi and then to Qatar.

Source: AFP

MORE FROM TELEGRAPH.CO.UK

WORLD NEWS

TELEGRAPH FOR IPAD FREE TRIAL

FREE PRIZE DRAW TO WIN £1,000

DUNHILL TRAVEL DEALS